AN INTERVIEW WITH PARENTS AND THE CHALLENGES THEY FACE AS SINGLE PARENTS

A MOTHER FIGURE HERE'S THEIR RESPONSE...

1. What's one deep fear you have for your child(ren), and how do you surrender that fear to God daily?

- One deep fear for my children is what if they make the painful mistakes I made , getting married at an early stage knowing nothing about marriage. I surrender that fear by trusting in God's plans for hope and a brighter future .
Jerimiah 29:11 this promise applies to them as well to me also

2. Can you share a moment when you felt like giving up as a single parent? What did God speak to your heart in that mome

- I have never had a moment of giving up but I doubted myself not knowing if I'm doing this right,if I'm raising them the right way ,if I'm teaching them the right things because at this time I'm a mother and a father at the same time

3. How do you process and pray through the loneliness of single parenting, and what's one way God has met you in that loneliness

- Processing loneliness is not about pretending it's not there ,it's about being honest before God . God has met me in so many different ways . He gave me strength to make good decisions and to be patient. He gave me a family to belong to my churc

4. What's one thing you're struggling to trust God about with your child(ren) right now, and how can you invite God deeper into that strugg

- One thing I struggle to trust God with my children is in the situations that they cannot control ,fear of harm and bad influences from friends . I shift from control to covering because He's our covering . I tell God that they are His and not mine ., I pray that He guards their heart ,mind and body in ways that I can't

5. Share a vulnerable moment when your child saw your weakness as a parent. How did you point them to God in that moment, and what did you lea

- It was when I lost patience and also doubted myself . At some point I ignored it and pretended that it didn't happen but then I realized that it was eating me up, I apologized and prayed to God to forgive me and help me to be gentle next time . At that time I pointed them to God by modelling repentance and by being humble . I always told myself that being weak does not disqualify me as a single paren

6. What's one area of your heart that's been broken as a single parent, and how is God bringing healing and comfort to that place?

- One of the deepest broken places has been loneliness, imagine no one to make decisions with or to tell about their behavior. In my brokenes God showed me that he is my healer and strength,God has been heal in g me by reminding me that he is a father to the fatherless, and note that healing does not take place at once ,it takes time and forgiveness and a willing heart

Psalms 68:5 A father of the fatherless, and a judge of the widows, is God in his holy habitation ..

A FATHER FIGURE: HERE'S THEIR RESPONSE...

1. What's one deep fear you have for your child(ren), and how do you surrender that fear to God daily?

- The fear i have for the children is someone else with bad intentions having to take care of the children when I am no more, so I ask the Lord that even if something happens to me they are safe in his hands.

2. Can you share a moment when you felt like giving up as a single parent? What did God speak to your heart in that moment

- There was a time when one child misbehaved and it happened for months, I felt hopeless and I was ready to give up and God showed up and told me to always forgive them for he has also forgiven my own sins

3. How do you process and pray through the loneliness of single parenting, and what's one way God has met you in that loneliness

- God made a promise, the Bible say, God sets the lonely in families so I pour out my heart to him in prayer for support

4. What's one thing you're struggling to trust God about with your child(ren) right now, and how can you invite God deeper into that struggle

- Wisdom to teach them, I feel like I'm not teaching them enough and I continue to ask God to give me wisdom and knowledge

5. Share a vulnerable moment when your child saw your weakness as a parent. How did you point them to God in that moment, and what did you learn

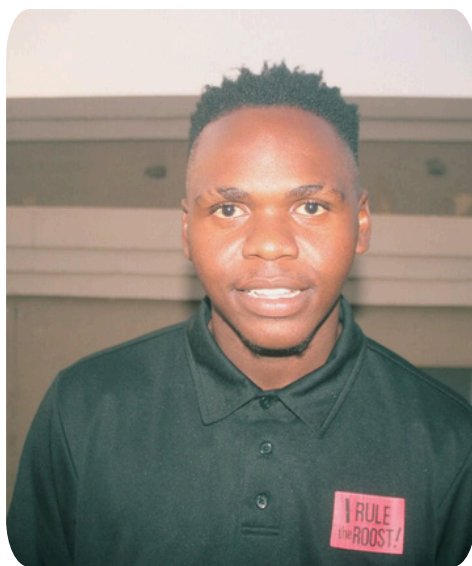

- One moment I can think of is snapping while talking to them, i then felt like I failed. I then apologised and told them im also human and let's ask God for help, I learned humility and reliance on God is key

6. What's one area of your heart that's been broken as a single parent, and how is God bringing healing and comfort to that place?

- The grief of my family dynamics, biological family bond is not there and God is bringing healing by his presence .

God does not mismanage placement." 🗨️ Read that again. If He opened the door, stop telling Him you aren't qualified. That's not being humble; it's being insecure. It's time to speak without flinching and lead without over-explaining. You're there because He trusted you there. Period.
